NEWS RELEASE

Are you interested in the rich history of safety and health and the many individuals, events, organizations and innovations that made safety and health practice what it is today?

If so, please visit the Safety and Health Historical Society (SHHS) web site (www.safetyandhealthhistory.org) and consider participating as an individual patron. Visit the "Resources" section to learn about numerous free articles, web sites, and other items on S&H history. SHHS is a new, non-profit, educational and charitable organization open to all individuals and organizations. Participation fees are tax deductible.

Are you familiar with any of the following? These are but a few of the items covered in initial issues of the quarterly SHHS journal that patrons receive: The Archives of Safety and Health.

- After working in a 3-mile WV tunneling project in 1931 (Hawk's Nest Tunnel), about 700 individuals died of silicosis within 5 years of their employment.
- In the late 1800s, about 50,000 people in the US died annually from boiler explosions.
- At the end of WWII, upstart auto companies sought to introduce auto safety features that are now standard but were put out of business.
- The very sad school fire in 1958 at Our Lady of Angels School in Chicago killed 92 innocent children, but led to major improvements nationally in life safety for schools.
- Do you know about any of these important individuals who affected major changes in safety and health? Lorenzo Coffin, Garrett Morgan, Edward Atkinson, Hugh DeHaven
- Do you know why laws require school busses to open the entry door when stopping at a railroad crossing?
- How did the first "Fire Prevention Day" in the U.S. get started? By whom and when?

Learn from the past to advance your safety and health practice.
